DEP pushing for tire dump in Greenwood

If the state Department of Environmental Protection has its way, Albany's loss will be Greenwood's gain, so to speak.

The DEP has brought pressure on Peter Gordon to remove the tires he has illegally been dumping in Albany. Mr. Gordon has been removing the tires at the rate of one trailer-truckload a week, according to DEP enforcement officer Steve Pelletier. Mr. Pelletier said there are about 1,000 car tires—or equivalent—per trailer load. He added that there are several hundred thousand illegally dumped tires in Albany.

Mr. Pelletier said the removal of the illegally dumped tires is "part of the enforcement pressure on my part."

Aside from enforcement pressure, the DEP has been working with Mr. Gordon on his plan to establish a legal tire recycling facility in Greenwood, off the Rabbit Road. This is the carrot the agency is holding before Mr. Gordon to further convince him to continue removing tires from the Albany dumps. "If they do get a licensed facility out there [in Greenwood], they can work without me on their back," Mr. Pelletier said.

Mr. Gordon had been scheduled to submit a formal application to the DEP by tomorrow (Thursday), but Mr. Pelletier

New restaurant receives licenses

Michael and Marlene McKamey are hoping to open their Mexican-American restaurant, Cisco & Poncho's, in the Bethel Business Center shortly. Work on remodeling a portion of the mini-mall for the restaurant began last week.

The Board of Selectmen, at their meeting last Tuesday night, held a public hearing on a liquor license and a vendor's license for the restaurant. Following the hearing, the board unanimously approved both licenses.

The McKameys told the selectmen the restaurant would be open six days a week for breakfast, lunch and dinner. Breakfast would feature American cooking, while lunch and dinner would have Mexican specialties on the menu. They said it would be a family restaurant and would serve drinks only with meals. The McKameys presently operate their restaurant in Berlin, N.H., but are anxious to move it to Bethel. They envision having seating for 45. "There are 37 parking spaces," Mr. McKamey said.

Board to look again at early dismissals for elementary pupils

SAD #44 Board of Directors Monday night voted to reconsider its policy of releasing elementary students at noon on Wednesdays. The matter will be placed on the agenda for the board's next meeting, scheduled for Sept. 12.

The policy, adopted on a trial basis last June, is intended to allow teachers more time for professional development activities.

According to Superintendent Dewane Craig, because of adjustments in the elementary school schedules and bus schedules, elementary pupils will spend at least as much time in class this year as last; some, depending on location, will spend more.

Many parents, however, have complained to board members that they have no way of ensuring that their children are properly supervised on the free afternoons.

"[Classroom] time is not the problem," said Margaret Hand, of Woodstock, at Monday evening's board meeting. "I'm concerned that we're creating a latchkey society. It's a real problem in Woodstock." Mrs. Hand said, noting that some children were being bussed to Bethel so they could be taken care of by a relative.

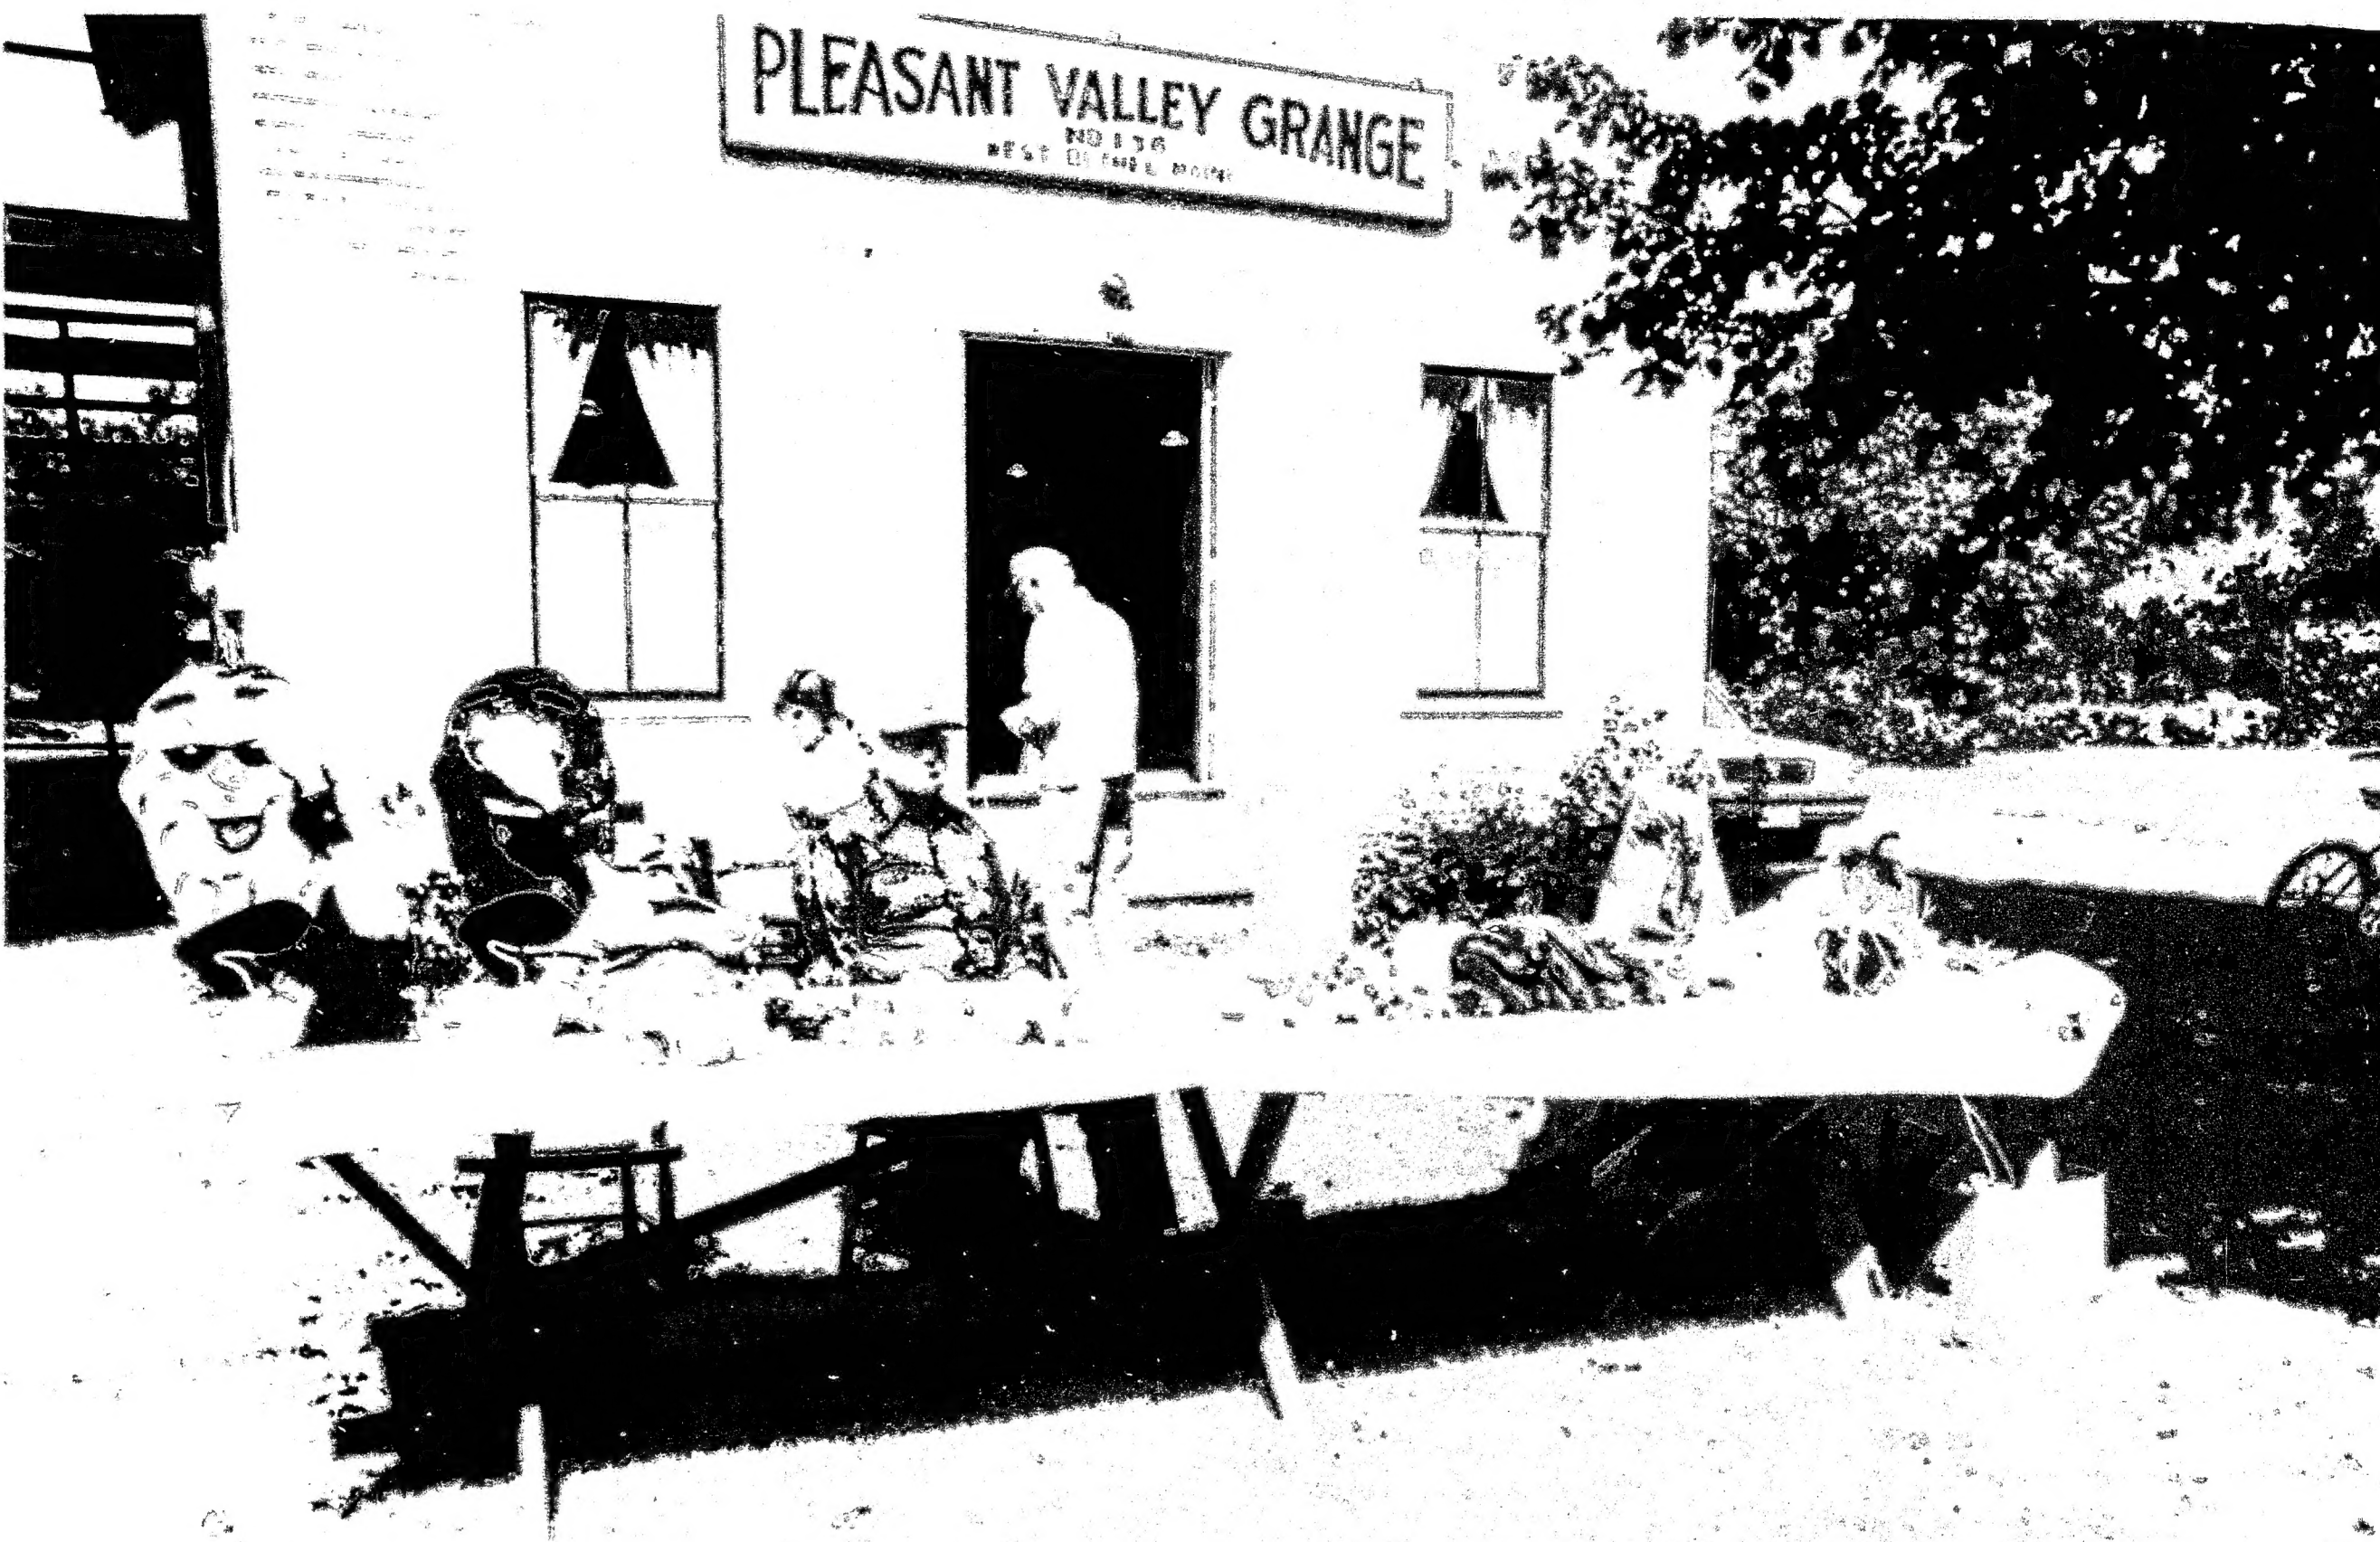

"I've had a lot of complaints," said Cheryl Eliot, Bethel director. "There's no place for these kids. There's a drastic problem out there."

"Parents have brought to my attention that children in Germany and Japan go

Newry voters, in heavy turnout, reject 6-month moratorium bid

It took 30 minutes for all the Newry voters packed into the municipal building Monday night to vote at special town meeting. It took another eight minutes to count all the ballots.

When the counting was finished, the issue for which the meeting was called—whether or not to impose a 180-day moratorium on new subdivisions and multi-family housing—was defeated by an almost 2-to-1 margin. The vote in the secret ballot was 111 against the moratorium proposal and 64 in favor. Four ballots were disqualified because they were folded. Total attendance of registered voters was 179.

The moratorium issue was such a hot topic in town that people who had not previously taken part in town affairs rushed to register in order to be able to vote. Selectman Roger Hanscom said there used to be 228 registered voters in town. At Monday night's meeting, the list had grown to 275. "It seemed that quite a number were part-time residents," he said.

The great public display of concern over what happens in town was encouraging to people on both sides of the moratorium issue. Bonnie Learned said after the proposal was defeated, "I don't think we lost. Maybe now we'll have more say [in town affairs] because of all the people who registered."

Rockie Graham, an Albany resident who was active in supporting the moratorium proposal, said, "The selectmen and the planning board will be more likely to solicit public opinion and listen to public opinion."

Jim Sysko, chairman of the planning board, said he hoped the enthusiasm of residents to take part in the special town meeting would carry over to more mundane affairs. "I hope we'll get more participation on the planning board," he said.

Former planning board member Veronica Smith would like to see the planning board members elected, instead of appointed by the selectmen. She said the issue has been raised—two weeks ago at the public hearing on the moratorium—and will remain an issue.

The vote on the moratorium article came after very little discussion. Following comments pro and con by only a half-dozen voters, Arla Patch moved to cut off debate so that parents could vote and take their children home. On a show-of-hands vote, which was criticized by some because it was not counted [a two-thirds majority was needed], the motion to end

'I don't believe the reason we're here tonight is solid waste.'

Steve Wright

debate was declared "passed." (The moderator was Bill Cousins, of Bethel, who was invited to chair the session by Selectman Steve Wright, who usually is moderator at town meetings.)

Discussion on the issue began after the moderator read the proposed moratorium ordinance and Veronica Smith moved for its adoption. Her motion was seconded by Brooks Morton, one of the originators of the petition drive that led to the special town meeting.

Before any discussion could take place, however, the moderator accepted a second motion suggested by Helen Berry to allow the two Newry school board members to vote and depart for Bethel to attend the school board meeting. This motion was made by Roger Hanscom and seconded by Bonnie Learned. It passed unanimously.

When discussion returned to the original motion that had been left hanging, Mr. Morton explained that the moratorium was necessary in order to give the town time to plan for solid waste disposal. Presently the town's solid waste goes to the Bethel landfill. But Bethel selectmen have informed their counterparts in Newry that the landfill may be closed to outside towns next July 1. Mr. Morton said the town has not moved quickly enough to plan for this eventuality and a moratorium is needed in order

Army units training with close-support jets this Saturday in Gilead

Army Reserve units will be training at the Bog Brook Training Area, on Rte. 2, Gilead this weekend, according to MSgt. R.A. Ronan, of the 78th Division Training Group, in Lewiston. The training will last from Friday night to Sunday morning.

On Saturday morning, between about 10 and 10:30 a.m., the training will include low-level flights by two A-10 close-support aircraft. The planes will try to confine their operations to an area between the White Mountain National Forest (to the south), Locke Hill and Jordan Mountain (to the north), Peaked Hill (to the east), and Peabody Island (to the west).

As jets go, the A-10 is not particularly noisy and flies at comparatively slow speeds, between 200 and 300 knots, the sergeant said.

If any residents in the area the jets will be flying over have questions, they should call Sgt. Wilson or Sgt. Lepage, at 782-6537 or 782-7459.

Summer season was good—but not great—for local business

With the summer tourist season ended, local innkeepers are totaling up their numbers of guests. In general they're finding that the season started slowly but ended with a flourish.

Robin Zinchuk, of the Chapman Inn, was one of those innkeepers who, in July, was wondering when the season would begin. But August more than made up for the delayed start; in fact, it was the Chapman Inn's busiest August ever. Mrs. Zinchuk said she noticed more foreign tourists this summer than in previous years, particularly British. She speculated that the weaker dollar might have influenced more Europeans to visit this country.

Fidelis Taylor, of the Rostay, said, "It got off to a slow start, but we had a very good August. You get to the Fourth of July and you wonder where everyone is. But August was wonderful."

The experiences of the two innkeepers was typical of tourism statewide, with the end of summer making up for a slow beginning.

Lyn Chapman, at Edelweiss Country Store, said her business was off somewhat because of a slowdown in condominium construction in Bethel. Whereas the construction crews used to be lined up in the store at lunchtime, this summer the line was shorter.

The great heat of the summer might have kept some potential tourists off the road, but it also seemed a boon to the River View Motel, one of the few tourist stops with all air-conditioned rooms. Paula Gillies, of the River View, said their occupancy rate for the month of June was 30 percent, compared to 8 percent in 1987; for the month of July, occupancy was at 57 percent, compared to 43 percent the year before; and in August occupancy was at 71 percent of capacity, compared to 58 percent in 1987.

Ray Moran, at the Bethel Inn, also reported an exceptionally strong summer. In general, business at the Inn was up 25-30 percent, Mr. Moran said.

Sandy Mahon, at The Four Seasons, said her establishment bucked the trend of having a slow July. In fact, she said, July was the single-best month ever for her inn. In general, she ran full all summer, thanks to having 13 of her 15 rooms taken by NTL. "It was fabulous," she said.

Press Association ends successful conference

The more than 200 members and guests who attended the Maine Press Association conference in Bethel last weekend concluded their agenda at the Saturday night awards banquet; but most stayed on another night, enjoying the perfect weekend weather and the facilities of The Bethel Inn.

At the awards ceremony, two competing weekly papers in Belfast, in Waldo County—the Belfast Republican and the Waldo Independent—shared first-place honors as the best weekly papers in the state. The best daily paper was judged to be the Evening Express, of Portland. The Maine Sunday Telegram was judged the best weekend paper. All judging was done by out-of-state newspaper organizations.

In western Maine, the Bridgton News walked off with five awards, while the Bethel Citizen was the only paper in Oxford County to win an award, taking second

Time to clear up sewer mess

As reported last week, the Bethel selectmen have authorized the town manager to try to beg or borrow $480,000 from the Farmers Home Administration to pay for sewer plant repairs. And this is just for starters. A complete overhaul of the plant and the sewer lines could cost $2 million.

Town Manager Rodney Lynch explained to the selectmen why the town is suddenly faced with such a whopping expense. "It should be noted," he said, "that the 1979 sewer plant facilities study recommended that the clarifiers, chlorine contact chambers, aeration tank, headworks and sludge handling process be modified and upgraded. At that time the Town should have been increasing the sewer rates and setting aside money in a capital improvement account for the upgrade work because the Town knew then that the DEP would someday eventually make us perform the work we are now planning to do." Harsh words, but true.

Not only is the DEP now forcing the Town to repair its faulty system, but the state agency has also effectively halted growth in the village by ordering the selectmen to deny any new sewer hook-ups. Unless the order is quickly modified—and it won't be until the sewer plant is brought back to health—the town's Comprehensive Plan will be just a worthless piece of paper. This is because the plan—and the Site Plan Review Ordinance—envisions future growth being more concentrated in the village and less concentrated in the rural areas. With no sewer available, however, all growth will take place in the rural areas, contrary to what town residents voted for.

Although it's lamentable that town officials waited to act until forced to by the DEP, they are to be commended for now tackling the problem head on. Instead of seeking more delays for more study, the selectmen (as reported last week), have authorized the town manager to set up a schedule of work at the sewer plant and to negotiate with DEP for using that schedule as the basis for a consent agreement. If such an agreement is accepted by the DEP, it is envisioned that the agency will relent on its prohibition against new hook-ups and will go easy on fining the Town for past infractions of its wastewater discharge permit.

Still to be dealt with by the selectmen is how to pay for the repairs to the sewer system. Assuming the town manager is successful in obtaining a combination of federal and state grants and loans, the loans must still be paid off. The selectmen must now provide leadership in devising methods of raising enough money to pay off the prospective loans. bfw

Moose taking toll of unwary drivers—and vice versa

Moose are a popular tourist attraction along many of the state's highways. But the large animals can also create a danger to motorists.

Dozens of moose-vehicle collisions occur in Maine each year, but some roads record many more accidents than others.

Moose often cross busy highways to get from one favored feeding area to another. They are also attracted to roadside ditches and wet places by the runoff of salt used for clearing ice from highways in the winter. The salt accumulates in low, wet places and is craved by moose. Also, during September and October, moose are in the annual "rut," or mating season, and are traveling more than normal in search of mates.

All of these factors add up to a formidable hazard to unwary motorists—especially at night when the dark-colored moose are hard to see in auto headlights until it is too late to avoid them.

Due to its size and long legs, which place the body mass high in the air, a moose can totally destroy an automobile, and seriously injure or kill its occupants. Typically, when a moose is struck by a car, its body smashes into the windshield and caves in the roof.

The Maine highway with the highest number of recorded moose collisions each year is a 50-mile stretch of Route 201, a popular entry point from the Province of Quebec, Canada, through Jackman and to Bingham in western Maine. This portion of Maine has a very high density of moose. Much of the highway is through remote woodlands.

The Maine Department of Transportation has recently placed a number of large signs identifying areas along Route 201 where encounters with moose are frequent. A committee of Maine Inland Fisheries and Wildlife Department and Department of Transportation employees has been studying the problem along Route 201 and is making other recommendations to improve the situation. But they advise that a major cause for the accidents is excessive speed and a failure by many motorists using the highway to recognize the danger moose present.

Improvements to Route 201 in recent years have made it attractive to high-speed driving. The result: from 30 to 70 moose are struck and killed each year along that 50-mile stretch of highway.

Many moose collisions also result in human injuries. Two motorists traveling Route 201 were killed in collisions with

Letters to the Editor

To the Editor:

As a new resident of Newry, and Maine, I was surprised by the warmth and friendliness with which I have been welcomed into the area.

I registered to vote within a month of moving to Newry because of the importance of the upcoming presidential elections. Unfortunately the hospitality which welcomed me was not repeated when I wanted to become involved in the community and vote on the moratorium. I was appalled by the assumptions voiced and editorialized that the intentions of newly registered voters was to pad the NO vote. This assumption is unreasonable to those of us who want to make this area our new home.

Bahre plans subdivision

Bob Bahre, well-known for his housing projects in the Oxford Hills area, is planning an 18-lot subdivision on 96 acres on the Bird Hill Road, in Bethel. The plan will be presented to the Bethel Planning Board tonight (Wednesday).

Also on the agenda is a discussion and vote on the 40-acre exemption from the subdivision ordinance, a look at the amended covenants on the Town's airport industrial lot subdivision and re-signing of the final plat plan, further discussion of the site plan review application for 60 condominium units in the proposed Riverbend project, on the Sunday River Road, and a look at a sketch plan for change of use of the building next to Breau's Dairy Shop. (Most recently it was a carpet barn.)

moose in 1987.

One local game warden, Rodney Small, of Jackson, had already handled more than 30 moose accidents by mid-August of this year.

Many of the people injured or killed, according to Warden Small, are residents of Canada, who use Route 201 to reach a popular vacation spot, Old Orchard Beach. The highway is also heavily used by large trucks hauling goods, particularly logs and lumber, between Maine and Quebec.

Evidence of the frequent moose-vehicle encounters is easily seen in the black tire skidmarks on moose crossing areas.

A note from the publisher

The Maine Times, an excellent—if sometimes pretentious—journal of issues and opinions, complained last week about news organizations, such as The Bethel Citizen, accepting free trips from newsmakers, such as Central Maine Power Co.

The Maine Times was speaking specifically about last week's trip to the Hydro-Quebec facility in James Bay, Quebec, sponsored and paid for by CMP, and attended by reporters from a half-dozen news organizations, including The Citizen.

Readers will recall that in last week's story from James Bay, written by The Citizen's Michael Daniels, it was clearly noted that the trip was sponsored by CMP. Having pointed that out up front, before the story itself, I feel the reader is fairly forewarned and can be on guard for anything that hints of a pro-CMP bias.

This is the same sort of warning that any responsible news organization appends to any press release or press briefing. For example, if we receive a press release from a local company claiming their sales are up 100 percent in the past year, we report that, "according to a company statement, sales are up 100 percent." The reader is thereby made aware that the information being reported comes from the newsmaker, rather than from an independent agency.

If we go to a press luncheon hosted by a company or agency to announce some new development or program, we report that the information in the story was given by the newsmaker in question at a luncheon paid for by the same newsmaker.

I'm sure that The Maine Times would not suggest that news organizations decline to accept invitations to press lunches or refuse to accept press releases.

What a newspaper, and newspaper readers, must be careful of is too much reliance on press releases and other forms of corporate and bureaucratic public relations. Quite obviously, a press release tries to inform in such a way as to put the best light possible on the company or agency issuing the release.

And quite obviously it is a news organization's job to make sure it's reporting the whole story, without any particular bias. Therefore a newspaper or TV station will normally seek the views of people not connected with the company or agency in question in order to put together a fair and balanced report.

This is the way The Citizen has handled the Hydro-Quebec story from the very beginning—trying to obtain as much information as possible, given the limited resources of the paper. When offered the chance to visit the Hydro-Quebec facility, we were delighted to accept, since this was a chance to get a first-hand look at something we have regularly reported on.

To accept or reject a sponsored trip—whether to a new factory, or a war, or a power plant—is not a question of newspaper ethics. Rather, it's a question of whether or not a news organization is willing to accept input from all sides on any particular question. The Citizen is open to input from all sides and publicly thanks CMP for inviting us along on the trip to James Bay, Quebec. It should be noted that, while we have tried to report as many sides of the issue as possible, the paper's editorial position has been that the power industry is not needed and the 100 miles of high-voltage towers to be erected in western Maine would needlessly disfigure—and possibly endanger—the environment.

Reporter Michael Daniels' final report on the Hydro-Quebec site and the continuing controversy swirling about CMP's plan to import power from James Bay will appear in next week's paper.

The 202 journalists and guests who attended last weekend's Maine Press Association conference at The Bethel Inn had high praise for the treatment they received at The Inn and in the various shops and restaurants in Bethel. The Inn people I heard most often being praised were Gretchen Davidson for taking meticulous care to ensure that the weekend ran smoothly, and Jim Stoner for providing wonderful entertainment at the luncheons, dinners and late-night socializing.

We Be People

This week marks the first anniversary of Constitution Week, celebrated last year at this time to mark the 200th anniversary of the signing of the Constitution.

The Constitution and Bill of Rights is, as you know, a very short, but very profound document. It has held our country together and allowed a generally peaceful transition of power from faction to faction and from geographical area to geographical area.

America's record of political cohesion is all the more remarkable because it has taken place in a land where immigration and migration, slavery and class struggle, have tended to pull the country apart rather than weld it together.

The Constitution is our political philosophy and the diagram of our political system. It is an idea and blueprint, strong enough to keep our political system stable yet malleable.

If you haven't read this remarkable document for awhile, or if you've never read it, you should. Therefore The Citizen is making available—free—copies of the Constitution. Just come in and ask for to provide time for planning. "Having been to Solid Waste Committee meetings," he said, "we still don't have any funds; we still don't have a plan."

Selectman Hanscom disputed that assertion, claiming the town did have surplus funds that could be used to set up a transfer station—if that is the plan decided upon. And, he added, it would be a simple matter to call a special town meeting to raise additional funds, if they are needed.

Because the stated rationale for the proposed moratorium was the fact that the town needed to plan for the disposal of its solid wastes, Selectman Wight spoke to that issue. "I don't believe we have an emergency in solid waste," he said. "I don't believe the reason we're here tonight is solid waste. I think we're here because of concern with the rate of growth in town."

"This moratorium, if enacted, will probably be challenged in court. Since the [moratorium] ordinance is tied to solid waste, I think we'll have legal troubles if we pass it."

Planning Board Chairman Sysko agreed: "If we have to just say 'no' to applicants, we're gonna wind up in court real fast."

In the final analysis, it seemed that most people who crammed into the municipal building had their minds made up, and arguments pro or con were not going to sway them. The surprise—to those on either side of the issue—was that the measure was so soundly defeated. They said they expected a much closer vote.

Mr. Morton, prior to the vote, was confident that the request for an additional 36-unit subdivision on the Sunday River Road—presented to the planning board last Wednesday night—would swing votes in favor of the moratorium. But that did not seem to happen.

The subdivision in question is a project proposed by the Glover Corp., some of whose principals are from Massachusetts, on 375 acres behind Jo and Romeo Baker's. If developed, the project would spread development from the Sunday River valley across the height of land into the Bear River Valley, which has remained relatively unaffected by developments nearer the skiway.

The project envisions 123 individual lots, some with individual houses, some with duplexes and some with townhouses. There would also be a pond and a 7½-acre commercial district.

The plans for the project will be reviewed at the planning board's next meeting, Wednesday, Sept. 21, at 7 p.m., in the town office.

Tire dump

said he was not sure if the application would be in by that date. Mr. Gordon was unavailable for comment.

Mr. Pelletier said Mr. Gordon has held talks with Bethel's fire chief regarding providing fire protection for the planned dump, since the Bethel Fire Department covers that portion of Greenwood. Additionally, Mr. Gordon has continued doing surveying work at the proposed site, and has been taking soil samples, according to Mr. Pelletier.

The proposed tire recycling facility would be on 36 acres, but only a small portion of the area would be covered with tires. Most of the land would be used for setbacks, a visual buffer strip, ponds for water, and a fire break, according to the DEP official.

Mr. Pelletier earlier told The Citizen, "If [the Gordons] can come up with a bonafide plan, I'm all for it." He said it will be difficult to sell the idea to the people of Greenwood and Bethel because of mistrust of the Gordons. "They've got a bad reputation in the public eye, which is unfortunate." Local officials have asked the DEP to hold a public hearing in the area before any decision is made on the tire dump application.

The DEP is anxious to have the Gordons set up a legal dump because presently there is not a single legal tire dump in the state. There are about a million tires throughout the state that would be brought to the Greenwood site, if it were established, according to the DEP official. The tires would be laced together in piles of 100-feet by 100-feet. Mr. Gordon has plans to shred the tires and sell them for recycling, according to Mr. Pelletier.

The tires the Gordons have been removing from the Albany sites are being trucked to a recycling facility in Massachusetts and to a dump in Bowdoinham, Mr. Pelletier added.

QUILTING COURSE OFFERED

SAD #44 Adult and Community Education will offer a machine quilting course, featuring the making of a log cabin pattern quilt. The sessions will be Wednesday evenings, beginning Sept. 21, with Donna McCarragher of Waterford as the instructor.

Students in the class will complete their own full-size quilt during the four weeks of the class, following the step-by-step method demonstrated each week by Ms. McCarragher.

The cost of the course is $10, with an optional book available for $8. Participants in the class will spend approximately $50 for the cost of materials for their quilts.

Following the log cabin quilt class, there will be a second class, starting Oct. 26, featuring a different quilt, the Irish chain, for which the book will cost $4.

To enroll in either course, call the Adult and Community Education office, 824-2780.

George Esper was the featured speaker at the Maine Press Association's annual fall conference held in Bethel last weekend. The AP special correspondent told the state's journalists it's important to keep in mind that the people have a right to know what's going on in government, and it's the press' responsibility to make sure they do know what's going on. During a break in the conference proceedings, Mr. Esper, who lives in Massachusetts, visited The Citizen office.

cond place in the Freedom of Information category.

The judge's comments on the article and publisher's column submitted for that category said, "[The Citizen] chooses a good local example to help readers understand the need for a strengthened state freedom of access law."

The Citizen's winning entry concerned the series of closed-door sessions held by the Bethel Board of Selectmen while negotiating the sale of two airport lots to GAMM II. Because of the secrecy of the negotiations, it was not until the deal was nearly finalized that it was brought to the attention of the officials that the lots in question had already been spoken for.

Most of the awards given out at the awards ceremony went to the large, coastal weeklies, while the Portland, Lewiston and Waterville papers won the lion's share of the awards given to dailies. The Citizen was the smallest paper to receive an award.

Cavenaugh Kelly—who writes for the Presque Isle Star-Herald, won a first-place award for a sports feature. He is the son of Ginger and Gene Kelly, of Bethel.

Nancy Perry, the State House reporter for the Portland Press Herald, was named the 1988 Journalist of the Year.

One of the highlights of the weekend conference was a talk by George Esper, an award-winning special correspondent of the Associated Press. Mr. Esper, who had been AP's bureau chief in Saigon, told the state's journalists why he covered the Indochina war for 10 years, even staying in Saigon after the North Vietnamese took over. "I never felt more worthwhile in my life," he said.

Despite the "mass slaughter" by both sides, and despite the death of friends and colleagues, and despite the difficulty in obtaining information from officials, the difficulty of getting to the battlefields, and the difficulty of sending stories out, Mr. Esper said he felt it was his duty to stay there and report the war. He said he was "driven by a belief in the people's right to know."

The question of the people's right to know was again raised at a workshop for the assembled journalists. Although there have been many examples throughout the state of officials defying the state's Right to Know law, probably the most horrendous example took place in the town of Lyman last spring.

There, at a selectmen's meeting, a member of the audience was arrested because he was tape recording the public meeting. He was later released and was not prosecuted.

The person involved was John Smith, a retired Army man, and he was on the workshop panel to talk about his experience. "My experience is from the point of view of an old country crank," he told the journalists. "I knew it was not a crime to tape a public proceeding. [And] I wouldn't surrender my tape recorder [when asked to do so by the first selectman]."

"So they recessed the meeting and called the deputy sheriff... I told him the same thing. Anyway, I wound up in the pokey. They booked me. They photographed me."

He didn't blame the police, who he said were "very nice." Rather, he blamed the selectmen for not knowing the law, and for wanting to keep town matters secret.

Other panelists told similar stories—concerning city governments, school boards and civil service commissions—and explained what they had to do to get these officials to comply with the law. In the case of the celebrated case in Bangor, where the city refused to divulge the names of the candidates for the job of police chief, the Bangor paper had to go

'Citizen' to publish tourism tabloid for winter season

The Bethel Citizen will once again publish its tourism tabloid this fall, featuring stories and ads of interest to winter tourists.

A letter announcing the specifics of the publication went out to regular advertisers last week.

The tabloid will once again feature color photos on the cover and a helpful color map in the centerfold. There will be new articles on local people and local crafts, plus articles on what's new at the ski areas.

The Citizen will print 35,000 copies of the tabloid and distribute them in Massachusetts, New Hampshire and Maine. Residents of the Seacoast area of New Hampshire will receive the tabloid with their daily paper, as 15,000 copies of the tabloid will be inserted in, and delivered with, The Portsmouth Herald. The remainder of the tabloids will be distributed at the Boston Ski Show and through ski shops, YMCAs, and tourist information offices, and in local restaurants, shops, and inns.

For information regarding advertising in the tabloid, call The Citizen office, at 824-2444.

If you have a calendar listing you would like included in the tabloid, make a note of it and send it to the Bethel Area Chamber of Commerce.

The deadline for all materials to be included in the tabloid is Oct. 7. The publication will be off the press in time for the Boston Ski Show, in mid-November.

In other business at last Tuesday's meeting [because the meeting concluded after The Citizen's deadline, there was room in last week's paper for only a portion of the news from the meeting], the selectmen held public hearings on an automobile graveyard permit for Bailey's Body Works, on Vernon Street, and on an automobile graveyard/junkyard permit for Clayton Swett, on Rte. 2, near Lover's Lane.

Concerning the permit for Bailey's, neighbor Drew Webster said, "I'd be concerned about a lot of cars [being there]—explosion, fire, whatever."

Joe Bailey promised there would not be a lot of cars on the lot, and those that would be there would not be junk. "The ones that are there will be rebuilt," he told the selectmen. He added, "I may take me three or four months to fix them. It's hard to find parts for these old cars."

Mr. Swett said he, too, was working on the cars on his property. "I have three or four Saabs which are runnable, except for brakes or radiators. I intend to work on them." As for the scrap metal in his yard, he said he hauls that off whenever there's enough to warrant a trip. With steel scrap, he waits until he has four tons, with aluminum scrap he hauls it off when he gets near a ton. He said this business may end in the not-too-distant future. "When the town gets to recycling, I understand there won't be much available to me."

The selectmen did not take action on either application.

Les Otten, president of Sunday River Skiway Corp., made a presentation to the board regarding a solution to the solid waste problems of Newry and Bethel. Mr. Otten, saying he spoke as a citizen of Newry and not as a spokesman, said it made economic sense for the two towns to work on a solution together, rather than have a duplication of effort.

[Presently, Newry uses the Bethel landfill for its solid waste; but the Bethel selectmen have put Newry on notice that that arrangement could end July 1, 1989. The selectmen want to preserve as much capacity in the landfill as possible to accommodate Bethel's needs. Officials feel there is still two to three years' of life remaining in the landfill.]

Mr. Otten said, "We have identical needs... [and] both towns are following identical paths [toward a solution]."

"It could be in the financial interests of both [towns] if we pursue a solution together."

Board Chairman Arlan Jodrey said the experience of the town in the past was that joint projects didn't work out. But Selectwoman Pat Doon said, "I think duplication of services between two small towns is utterly ridiculous." She said it would be good to sit down and discuss the pros and cons of cooperation versus duplication.

Mr. Jodrey suggested to Mr. Otten that the latter have Newry officials make a concrete proposal that Bethel officials could look at.

The board amended the covenants to be included on deeds of lots sold at the Airport Industrial Park. There are four lots remaining of the original six.

The board accepted the following bids: Ripley & Fletcher Co. for #1 and #2 fuel oil ($3.25 and 48.15 cents per gallon respectively); John C. Cullinan Co. for lead-free gasoline ($6.7 cents per gallon); Ralph Merrill for sludge hauling (34 cents per gallon); George Hayes for planting seven shade trees on Main Street ($1,500). The trees will be planted next spring.

The selectmen received a letter from Bill Pooley regarding the land acquisition program of the state.

all the way to the Supreme Judicial Court to get an order to force the city to divulge the names.

The journalists were told that the Maine Municipal Association will try to have the Legislature re-write the Right to Know law in order to prohibit the public from finding out the names of candidates for public positions.

to school five-and-a-half days a week," said Denise Putnam, of Woodstock. "I'm not saying that we should be competing with Germany and Japan, but I think we should consider whether we want our children sitting home watching the TV's that children in other countries will be inventing."

When the policy was originally adopted, the board agreed to review it quarterly. Most board members at Monday night's meeting appeared willing to give the policy at least one quarter before formally reviewing it, however, they supported Mrs. Hand's motion that it be put on the agenda for their next meeting, "so that the district can look at alternatives for child care."

Raymond Harrington, of Greenwood, said, however, that he saw little merit in the parents' concerns. "In my opinion SAD #4 is not a babysitting service," he said, adding that "responsible adults in the district" made the choice to have children and should be able to deal with having the children out of school on Wednesday afternoons, just as they do when they have the children home on vacations and holidays.

The problem, Mrs. Hand countered, was that during vacations and holidays high school students were available to supervise the younger students. On Wednesday afternoons the high school students are in school.

In other matters at Monday's meeting, John Brown, of Bethel, responded to a letter from Bethel Town Manager Rodney Lynch regarding Mr. Brown's remark at an earlier board meeting that the funds being used to pave the Col. Dyke Airport would be better spent on such things as providing better sports facilities at the Telstar complex.

"In clarification of my remarks of August 8," Mr. Brown said, "might I say they were not meant to denigrate the authority of the local selectmen in any way. These officials had and have no alternative but to carry out the mandate of the 1983 Bethel Annual Town Meeting to pursue the airport/industrial park project. In fact they would be remiss if they did not derelict in their duties if they had not done so."

"I was aware, as Dr. Howe pointed out at the meeting, which was not reported, that the federal funds for the airport project were from dedicated sources."

"Another former Bethel selectman, whose conservative credentials are impeccable, told me last Tuesday evening that given the problems of waste water and solid waste disposal, he would rather the funds be used on those areas. But he, like I, realized that this was not possible due to the money and source."

"We, as school directors, are well aware that dedicated funds cannot be used for purposes other than intended by their source: i.e., we cannot use special education money, for instance, to re-roof a school building."

"Perhaps my remarks of Aug. 8 should have been prefaced by saying 'all other things being equal, it would be a better use of federal funds, etc.' But rarely, if ever, are all other things equal."

In personnel matters, following two lengthy executive sessions the board approved the following elementary substitute teacher and extra-curricular appointments.

Elementary substitute teachers: Katherine L. Bennett, Macky Chapman, Sylvia Clanton, Linda Curley, Betsey Dobbe, Carol Emery, Reid Forbes, Laurie French, Shirley Gammon, Jill Gray, Arlene Greenleaf, Pamela House.

Telstar to have ITV site in operation by Sept. '89

Telstar Regional High School will be one of 23 high schools in Maine to be "Satellite Sites" for the Community College of Maine Instructional Television System (CCMITS).

These sites will be joined in the first year by 27 other sites yet to be selected by the Community College of Maine, for a total of 50 sites.

Over the next five years the system will consist of over 250 sites, to include every public high school, all seven University of Maine System campuses, all six Maine Vocational Technical System campuses, over 15 regional off-campus University of Maine centers, nearly 20 University of Maine System "extended sites," the Maine Maritime Academy, the Department of Educational and Cultural Services central office and the System Office of the Maine Vocational Technical Institute System.

The CCMITS is designed to establish an integrated, statewide, telecommunications system with both broadcast and receive capabilities. A wide range of services will be available, potentially including high speed data transmission and video teleconferencing.

But the educational centerpiece of the teleconferencing system will be an Interactive Instructional Television System (ITV). Once the system is complete, no citizen of Maine will be more than a few minutes from an electronic classroom and a broad spectrum of secondary, postsecondary and adult education opportunities.

"This is a significant step toward bridging the large geographic distances in our state for students, teachers and community members and simultaneously expand opportunities," said Educational and Cultural Services Commissioner Eve M. Bilher.

The initial 23 high schools were selected based on their needs assessment and goal statement in relation to 12 criteria and a methods and activity plan, which includes their compliance with the Joint Conditions/Agreement for Participation. These sites are expected to be

The ITV system will move education in Maine into the 21st Century by providing secondary, postsecondary and adult learners equal access to course offerings from across the State of Maine, the Northeast Region and the United States. Additionally, it will allow teachers to meet recertification requirements and participate in ongoing professional development within their own school district.

The Department of Educational and Cultural Services is pleased to be a major factor in this partnership with the University of Maine System, the Vocational Technical Institute System, the Maine Public School System and the Adult Education System to assure local accessibility of quality education and training at the local level.

Commissioner Bilher said: "The possibilities of the telecommunications network are virtually unlimited and represent quite the most exciting prospect of education that we have seen in a long time. We are excited about training ourselves and others to implement programming to provide the school and general community with the opportunity to take advantage of continuing education, reflecting increasing levels of personal aspirations and the cooperation between business and education providers."

AVCOG looks at tourism in western mountains

Western Maine is the state's only real four-season tourist area, Steve DeGosh, of the Androscoggin Valley Council of Governments, told representatives from the regions tourist-related businesses last Thursday.

Tourism in western Maine has excellent economic potential, he said, but full realization of that potential is being hampered by poor access, lack of coordination among the various organizations promoting tourism, and by lack of information about the characteristics of present and potential tourists.

Thursday's meeting, held at the Bethel Inn, was intended to review the impact of tourism in the mountain area of western Maine. Most of the meeting, however, was spent discussing how to better promote tourism.

"We have to start with the product," said Wendie Gray, marketing director at Sunday River Ski Resort. The area has many recreational amenities, she said, but finding out about them—for instance, where to rent a canoe or play tennis—is quite difficult for someone not already familiar with the area.

The skiing industry does a very sophisticated job promoting itself, she said, but in this regard it is "light years ahead" of the area's other tourist attractions and services.

AVCOG is currently at work on a computer-based inventory of western Maine's resources, recreational attractions, services and socio-economic components. Nonetheless, comprehensive information about the region is still lacking, and it is seldom available to potential tourists.

"You have to ask yourself if you're getting the information to the people who can help you," said Molly Glover, of East-West Travel in Rumford, who recommended that the area send representatives to travel agent trade shows.

If western Maine is to make the fullest use of its tourism potential, it will have to begin promoting less obvious attractions, such as bird, moose and bear watching, said Peter Cross, a wildlife biologist with the Maine Department of Inland Fisheries and Wildlife.

People are willing to drive to the Rangeley area to see moose, he said, "but we have areas here where there are just as many and they are just as observable."

"The aesthetics of the western mountains are quite remarkable," he said. "For example, there are unique assemblages of birds on local mountains, and people who are into bird-watching will spend considerable amounts of money to add birds to their lists."

Northwest Bethel

By CLARICE GIBSON

Sept. 7 I had to go to Norway on business. Was surprised at how much the foliage had turned in the last few days. Went up the hill by Hunt's Corner. Some one's pig and pony were in the churchyard. They are working on the road but have always thought that one could have a beautiful view before one got to the church coming in from Waterford. The Labor Day weekend was not too good weather-wise and Monday evening we had rain and wind. Jim and Sue came to get our granddaughter, Heather, Monday morning. Friday Esther Crockett, Frankie, Theresa, Heather Gibson and I went to the recently opened oriental restaurant in Gorham, N.H. Theresa stayed for two nights to play with her cousin, Sunday Frank's sister and husband, Roberta and Eddie Fyfe, came for dinner and brought their dinner. Sunday evening my brother, John, came and helped me do a couple of jobs around the house. Then Monday night Frank came into the shop from his trip to upper Quebec. He called for me to come get him and he had gotten two caribou. There were 12 in the party and each got his two.

Last week when I was putting in changes I forgot about a family by the name of Walker who moved in opposite Batters'. The Walkers were one of the traders who had to move out of Douglas Trailer Park.

Friday Judy Coolidge, Jessica, Sarah and Vicky attended Vicky's Brownie cookout and award ceremony at Nancy Grover's in Mason.

Dr. Leonard, Becky, Jon and Jeni Shaw drove up to Brintree, Mass. Sunday, Sept. 4, to visit his parents, Dr. and Mrs. Jules Shaw.

Weekend guests of Sam and Ginny McCoy were Mr. and Mrs. Lester Johnston, of Deerfield, Mass. Mr. Johnston is Ginny's brother and the Johnstons also visited Mr. and Mrs. Robert Stearns as Mrs. Johnston Arlene is Robert's sister.

Saturday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Homer Smith were Larry, Sally, Jack and Shawn Smith, of East Conway, N.H. Dennis, Lisa and Kaley Smith were also up. Dennis (husband) and Adam Smith, son of Doug Smith, arrived from Lexington, N.C. Eddie Smith has taken the week off as Adam will be spending the week visiting his father and grandparents. (Can't remember if Doug had put in a trailer across from his parents before I stopped writing. I do know that he has taken out the old trailer and put in a much nicer one.)

Mr. and Mrs. Joe Shimamura were grandparents. Sept. 2, a baby girl born at Stephens Memorial Hospital, weighing in at 6 lbs. 8 ozs. Parents are Jody and Jolene Shimamura.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Bond, of Pittsfield, N.H., stayed Saturday and Sunday with all his niece and husband, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Shimamura, and visited his sister, Thelma Merrill, at Ledgewood Nursing Home.

Matthew, Melinda Mason Bishop and Stephen went to the wedding of one of their friends over the weekend. Sunday Charlie and Ruth Mason and Betty Blake went to visit their children and grandchildren, Lee and Terry Mason Blake and daughters, Beth, Diana and Caroline.

David Mason caught a nine pound bass which he gave his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Mason, and they had it for Sunday night supper.

Debbie Seames, Dawn, Ryan and Rusty, went to her folks' camper at Abbott's Anchorage Saturday.

Sept. 2 Bob and Linda Howe and sons, Seth and Jonathan, attended her brother's, Edward Fontaine's wedding to Sue Ramey in Mexico. Linda was bridesmaid and Jonathan was ring bearer.

Sept. 3 Bob and Linda Howe attended his 15th anniversary graduation from Telstar, gathering at Town and Country in Shelburne, N.H., and had an enjoyable evening.

Don and Karen Bean are getting land cleared and ready for a farm pond. They are also doing remodeling on the ell of the house.

I found out who the new neighbors are at the beginning of the road. They are Wayne and Sharon Columbus, originally from central Missouri. They have two daughters, Laura and Jean.

Sept. 3 someone (a family) came to ask who lived in the house at the beginning of our road as they were looking for a rent. This brought back memories of about 40 years ago when we had to move as the rent was living in was going to be taken by the owner's son to be married daughter. We went up one street and down another in Norway, South

Pans and eventually seeing if we could find anything even resembling a rent. If we even saw a window without curtains we would sometimes stop, hoping someone had taken them down when they moved. The folks finally bought a piece of land and, as I have written before, we moved into a roof over our heads and four walls with windows and outside doors. No second floorboards, cupboards, partitions, water or bathroom. So we took to the woods. Looking back I often think how frustrated I must have been as she was a meticulous housekeeper. Thank maybe this is one of the reasons I hate housework.

God is high
Day is done, gone the sun
From the lake, from the hills, from the sky.
Safety rest, all is well! God is high

Women
at the Wheel

Mystified when your mechanic talks in garage-ese?
Horrified at the thought of changing a tire?
Tired that you may be neglecting your vehicle through ignorance of car care?

You can learn what makes your car tick in one evening with Women at the Wheel.

We offer this seminar free because it's to our benefit that women understand their cars and look after them.

Course leader, Mary Jackson, knows more about cars than most men. In fact, men are also welcome to attend the seminar. Using simple diagrams and occasional one-liners, Jackson takes the mystery out of pistons, cylinders, radiators, transmissions and brakes.

Join us at the Bessey Motor service garage for free coffee and donuts, a free car care manual, fun giveaways—and an information jump-start that may change your whole way of relating to your car.

To reserve your place call 743-6341.

North Paris

By DORIS C. LAWRENCE

Glad to see Clarice Gibson's news in the Citizen again.

Mrs. Madge MacCush has gone to Nova Scotia for several days.

West Paris Grange are having a dance Oct. 1; it may be their last dance.

Richard Felt's Band, prizes and homemade pies. A food sale and flea market at the Grange Hall, Oct. 15.

I visited Mr. and Mrs. Richard Felt and Mr. and Mrs. Roy Silver had spent the weekend at Mt. Desert Island, Acadia Park, where Roy was once a Park Ranger. Daughter Jennifer went to Vermont. She visited Granby Zoo.

I had a yard sale Saturday, Oct. 3. Fannie Whitten helped me and we had a good turn out. Richard Felt and Sharon Silver came Sunday morning and bought what was left. Just in time, for it started raining.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Baker were at their camp in Rangeley and he said it rained only two hours.

Tuesday morning, Sept. 6, it was pretty frosty.

Joe Vatcher took his sister Fanny back to Massachusetts, Tuesday. Danny MacCush went with him. Joe Vatcher had to report for jury duty Wednesday. Joe Vatcher has a new blue pickup.

BROOKSSES ATTEND LEGION CONVENTIONS IN LOUISVILLE

Jeri Brooks attended the 68th annual American Legion Auxiliary National Convention in Louisville, Ky., Sept. 5-8.

She was one of 1,800 delegates or alternates elected to attend the convention of the world's largest patriotic women's organization.

Dona and Carolyn Brooks attended the American Legion's 70th convention, also in Louisville, Sept. 2-8. Mrs. Brooks served as a representative of the Department of Maine on the Americanism Convention Committee during the convention.

"The Jamaicans are picking apples at Abbott's Orchards."

Jerry Oja, of Massachusetts, visited his folks Mr. and Mrs. Fred Oja for the weekend.

Callers at the "Root" Lawrences have been Margaret Stevens, Ryan Dillingham, Mr. and Mrs. Odell Heath, Mr. and Mrs. Norman Abbott and Joanne, Mr. and Mrs. Glen Plinkham, Mr. and Mrs. Norman Millett, Charles Coffin, Dale Coffin and Sandra, Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Heath, Richard Felt and Sharon Silver, Joe Vatcher and Fannie Whitten.

Mr. and Mrs. William Castele and family have bought Arnold Coffin's trailer and moved in two weeks ago. They both work at the I.P. Mill at Jay.

Newry

By AMY HANSCOM

Seneca and Amber Brooke, Jennie and Christopher Bowie and Samantha and Katie Brooke were supper guests of their grandparents, Owen and Sue Wight, Sept. 3, to celebrate Samantha's seventh birthday.

Mr. and Mrs. William Brooke, Samantha and Katie, of Augusta, were overnight guests of Mr. and Mrs. Owen Wight.

Scott Wight, of Bronx, N.Y. and Mr. and Mrs. Matthew Wight and family, of Fairfield, were weekend guests of Mr. and Mrs. Owen Wight the weekend of Aug. 27-28. Susan, Jennifer and Christopher Bowie and Randy and Audrey Brooke joined then Aug. 28, to celebrate Sue Wight's birthday. Seneca Brooke also celebrated her birthday, her 11th.

Keith Durgin has been laying Susan Bowie's waterpipes deeper, so that they will not freeze. Susan has been having pipe freezing problems winters.

Herbert Morton II, of Andover, Mass., was a guest of his mother, Helen Morton, Friday to Tuesday, Sept. 24.

Karlene Bachelder, Betsy Clark, Terley Lowery, Gilbert Seelye, Louise Tetley, Sylvia Wight, Olive Anderson and June Swan were at Oxford Lanes, Rumbold, bowling Sept. 7. Thelma Lowery was high scorer on both singles and triple.

The Ladies Circle of the Newry Community Church met Sept. 6 at the home of Freda Robertson, with six members attending. The meeting was opened by Olive Anderson, president. Hostess, Freda Robertson, led devotions. Secretary, Freda Robertson, took the roll call and read the minutes of the last meeting, which were accepted. There was no correspondence and no bills to be paid. Both the Circle and Church treasurer's report were accepted. Louise Tetley gave further instructions on the tray ornaments which were to be made for the two nursing homes. Sylvia Wight

Surplus food distribution Sept. 15, at Rumbold

Government surplus food will be distributed in Oxford County this week, according to Community Concepts, Inc., the local service organization directing the program. Locally, distribution will be Thursday, Sept. 15, from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the National Guard armory, in Rumbold.

Last year 268 tons of food were given out to 7,556 families in western Maine. "Volunteers will be needed more than ever to help process applications and bag cheese, flour, powdered milk and butter," according to Wayne Blood, coordinator of the distribution for Community Concepts. Volunteers have made it possible for the program to continue despite continuing cuts in administrative funds by the federal government.

Last year nearly 300 volunteers donated 1,375 hours to make the distribution to the elderly, handicapped individuals and low-income families a success. If you can help call Wayne Blood at 795-4065.

The food supplies released by the U.S. Department of Agriculture are available to individuals and families meeting income guidelines under such federal programs as HEAP (Fuel Assistance), Food Stamps, Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC), Supplemental Security Income (SSI), Medicaid and the Elderly Tax and Rent Refund program.

A family of two or less will receive 18 pounds of food, four lbs. of powdered milk, five lbs. of processed cheese, four lbs. of butter and five lbs. of flour. Families of three or four members will receive twice this amount and larger families three times the volume.

Participants in the program are urged to bring paper bags when picking up food supplies.

For questions about eligibility call Community Concepts in South Paris, 743-7716, or in Auburn, 735-4065.

CARD OF THANKS

I wish to thank all my friends from Auburn to Bethel and in between for taking time to write, telephone and come to see me while I've been laid up. It helps a lot and I'll never forget I'm up and gaining slowly. It is great to be home again. Many thanks to everyone who helped Ellen while I was away and still help in many ways. The best to you

High Street West

By VIVA WHITMAN

A lovely morning and I am taking advantage of it and washing. One never knows what the next day will bring even after listening to the weatherman. They can make mistakes as well as we can.

I expect by this time Russell, Laura and Bernard are well on their way to the airport to fly home. Their time in Colorado is two hours later than our time and they had to be at the airport by 6:30 for the 7:30 flight home. Hope they don't have to wait as they did when flying out.

Last Thursday was a busy day doing what had to be done here at home and then in the evening going to Grange at West Paris for installation of officers. Officers of Rumford Grange, West Paris Grange and Franklin Grange were all installed or at least those who were there, which was most of them. A late evening and when we came home, there was a little skunk in the ditch here by the driveway. I thought for a moment he was going to give us a smelly welcome but he decided differently, thank goodness, and we think he disappeared into the culvert as we didn't see any more of him. The skunks have been digging in the knoll above my car on Lawrence's land and doing quite a job of it. There are so many skunks around this year, seems like more than usual.

Friday we went shopping for a little in the morning but didn't do any more than was special that day that I recall.

Saturday afternoon I had a visit from Charlotte Cole when she brought some goodies, as is her manner when coming to visit. She had been blackberrying and brought Peggy enough for a pie and brought me some plant goodies for my African violets. She was going to West Paris to the dance and Peggy decided to go also.

Sunday wasn't a very good day but we went to Wynona's home for lunch and Courtney came home with me to keep me company. On the way home, the brakes let go in my car, so had to be very careful driving. Got home all in one piece though, for which we are thankful.

Monday morning Cori and I did a little cooking and played card games and other games to entertain her. In the evening we went to Grange at Franklin Grange where it was ladies' night and I was to be in the program. Peggy was lecturer and had gotten up a program about a Bag Ladies Convention where we all did our bit for entertainment. We had a good time putting on the program and hope everyone enjoyed it.

We were rather sleepy on Tuesday and didn't do too much other than play a few games and get meals. Did get the car to the garage and got the brakes fixed. Had to take it down in the morning and leave it and then go get it in the afternoon.

Wednesday, or yesterday, we waited for Wynona to come get Cori and she came around 11 or such a matter. Had an appointment at Dr. Sheil's in North Berwick in the early afternoon so had lunch with us at Peggy's. Charlotte Cole and Helen Chase came down to have lunch and play cards so we had an enjoyable afternoon. I'm afraid Peggy and Charlotte had the good run of cards most

East Bethel

By MYRA FOSTER

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Smith were at Popham Beach, Small Point and Flying Point the last week in August. Charles Smith caught a large bluefish off the beach in Popham Beach. On the way home they visited Mrs. Nellie Olson, at Victorian Villa in Canton, and went to church with her.

Mr. and Mrs. Almon Coolidge were surprised with a visit from Edward Allen, who used to live with them. Mr. Allen now lives in East Hartford, Conn. Mr. and Mrs. Paul Thacker, of Plattsburgh, N.Y., visited Mr. and Mrs. Clark Bartlett over the Labor Day weekend.

Mrs. Floribel Haines saw a large mouse cross the field in back of her house.

Mr. and Mrs. Andre Bernier and children, Ryan, Danielle and Jerry, visited friends in Plattsburgh, N.Y. over the Labor Day weekend.

Mrs. Valora Tuominen took Mrs. Fay Kimball to North Norway to see how her house was coming along. Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Tuominen hope to get into the house before winter.

Mrs. Linda Westleigh and Mrs. Myra Foster were in Gorham/Berlin, N.H., Sept. 1, shopping.

Miss Norma Sidelinger and Miss Joyce Noble, of the Yaggar neighborhood, Norway; Mrs. Grace Smith, of Locke Mills; and Mrs. Jo. Tyler, of Dixfield, visited the Foster Farm, Sept. 5. Mr. and Mrs. John Foster, of Andover, visited us Sept. 7 and John filled my woodbox.

Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Libby had as guests, Sept. 7 in the evening, Frank Gibson III and Myra Foster. They enjoyed a couple of games of "63". Does anyone have the rules for that game?

of the afternoon but we had fun just the same. It is always good to have friends come to visit and we do like to play 63.

Peggy has to go to the airport in Portland this afternoon to meet the folks coming home from Colorado. Hope the plane is nearer on time than when they went out. Weather can hinder planes from keeping schedules and that was what happened that day. If it is as clear other places as it is here this morning, there should be no trouble so will keep my prayers going for them today. So many plane accidents lately make one a little leary of taking a flight.

No great frost here as yet and hope it continues that way for a little longer. Wendell told me that they had a big frost at his place in West Paris yesterday. We are up a little higher and that helps. Got to get busy and can more beets as the squashes will soon be ready to take care of. Still got lots of cukes growing and Russell's Sweet Million tomatoes are loaded. We picked about a half full off yesterday that were ripe or nearly so. Take care everyone and have a good week.

ELISSA THIBODEAU, WILL TAYLOR AND GAYLE RUSSELL form the Bethel Area Health Center's newly organized occupational health and safety team. A reception was held last Thursday to introduce the team, and the concept of preventive health maintenance to the community. Occupational Health Nurse Russell said one of the biggest benefits for employers is that "it'll bring their workers' comp rates down." The program has a number of different aspects, from making health and safety inspections of the workplace (and making recommendations for improvement), to doing screening of workers for potential problems such as hearing loss and hypertension, to treating workers who are injured, to providing physical therapy for workers recovering from injuries, to working with employers to tailor-make jobs that can be filled by convalescing workers. The team members even work with employers and workers to eliminate such problem areas as back and arm and wrist fatigue. Each has a particular specialty (Thibodeau is a physical therapist, Taylor is a physician and Russell is an occupational health nurse) and together they are well-equipped to handle the entire range of job-related health problems.

Girl Scouts looking for new recruits for Cadette

If you're interested in travel, learning to ski, fashion, fitness or make up, backpacking, careers, first aid, arts or drama the Girl Scouts might interest you.

Last year, the local Cadette troop, with leaders Cindy Blake and Ann Speth, traveled to the New England Exposition, in Springfield, Mass.; they learned about cross-country and alpine skiing, and snowshoeing, and they worked with the Bethel Junior troops teaching various games and activities. The year came to a close with a trip to Acadia National Park.

Some people in the area have traveled to Savannah, Ga., Saskatchewan, Canada, and Liberia, Africa through a Scouting program called World Opportunities. This is just a sampler of what's possible.

Meetings will be held every other week on Friday after school, until 4:30, at Cindy Blake's house.

If you'd like to learn more and meet the people who are involved, girls in Grades 7-12 are invited to attend Cadette Troop 726's first annual Fall Gathering. It will be held at Littlefield Beaches on Sunday, Sept. 18, from 2 to 4 p.m. Bring beverages or munchies, volleyball, frisbee and swimsuit (just in case it's a scorcher). Miniature golf and video games will also be available. Call Ann Speth, at 824-3099, if you plan to attend, or for more information.

GIRL SCOUT REGISTRATION THIS SATURDAY IN BETHEL

Girl Scout registration will be Saturday, Sept. 17, at the United Methodist Church, on Main Street, Bethel. There is a great need for adults within the local troops. Any adult interested in helping local girls grow and learn is encouraged to register.

Andover couple has of semester spent te

"The people on Putuo Shan stared at us just the way we'd stare at two panda bears on the lawn of the Bethel Inn," said Ann Arbor, of Andover, describing a visit to an island off the Chinese mainland—one of the highlights of the semester she and her husband, John Rosenwald, spent teaching in China last fall.

In less adventurous years, Ann—a Mexico native—teaches junior high school English in Beloit, Wis., where John is an English professor at Beloit College. They currently summer in Andover, but hope within a couple of years to arrange their schedules so that they can spend much more of the year in Maine.

Before returning here, though, they plan to spend at least one more semester in China, a land whose people and culture they have come to love.

The opportunity to teach in China came about through an exchange program between Beloit College and Fudan University, in Shanghai—one of China's top schools.

John was invited to teach graduate courses for English majors, and soon after they arrived Ann was asked to teach undergraduate English.

While John's students were English specialists and virtually fluent in the language, Ann's students came from a variety of majors and many had been out of school for years.

"They were majoring in physics, chemistry, business or management," she said. "Many were older people who had been out of school since the Cultural Revolution, and they were invited to the university because they were now, for example, the head of a factory."

"They were thrilled to be back in school," she said. "Fudan University had been a dream they had nursed in the fields and factories."

A dream come true for the students, but nonetheless something less than dreamlike conditions for someone used to the physical comforts of the West.

Adequate heating was rare and privacy almost inconceivable.

John tried to clear up the situation by explaining that Ann was his second wife. This only made the situation worse.

"Shanghai is below the Yangtze River," John explained, "and by Chinese tradition there is no heat in public or private buildings below the Yangtze, despite the fact that from November to March the temperature often drops to 30 degrees."

The cold is intensified by the concrete floors in most buildings, John said. In his classrooms during the day the students would cluster wherever there was a patch of sun.

Hot water was available in public showers, Ann said, but because the rooms the students returned to were unheated, taking a shower and going home with wet hair often resulted in catching cold.

The rooms provided for John and Ann had the luxury of a combined heater/air conditioner, so when they could they offered their students the rare opportunity to take a hot shower and then dry off leisurely and comfortably in a warm room.

For the Chinese, privacy was virtually non-existent. The students slept eight to a room, and even senior faculty and university officials took crowded conditions for granted.

"It would be unheard of for the three of us to be alone here, having a private conversation in a room this large," John said, motoring around a small sitting room in their Andover farmhouse. "In fact, I've been told the Chinese have no word for privacy."

The lack of privacy in Shanghai made the brief vacation on the island of Putuo Shan all the sweeter. Just before they were to leave, their live-in tutor—who planned to accompany them—became ill, but rather than cancel the trip they set out on their own, trusting their own "baby Chinese" to see them through.

"We were able to find a room and food," John said, "but we certainly discovered the limits of our Chinese."

Girl Scouts looking for new recruits for Cadette

If you're interested in travel, learning to ski, fashion, fitness or make up, backpacking, careers, first aid, arts or drama the Girl Scouts might interest you.

Last year, the local Cadette troop, with leaders Cindy Blake and Ann Speth, traveled to the New England Exposition, in Springfield, Mass.; they learned about cross-country and alpine skiing, and snowshoeing, and they worked with the Bethel Junior troops teaching various games and activities. The year came to a close with a trip to Acadia National Park.

Some people in the area have traveled to Savannah, Ga.; Saskatchewan, Canada, and Liberia. Africa through a Scouting program called Water Opportunities. This is just a sampler of what's possible.

Meetings will be held every other week on Friday after school, until 4:30, at Cindy Blake's house.

If you'd like to learn more and meet the people who are involved, girls in Grades 7-12 are invited to attend Cadette Troop 726's first annual Fall Gathering. It will be held at Littlefield Beaches on Sunday, Sept. 18, from 2 to 4 p.m. Bring beverages or munchies, volleyball, frisbee, and swimsuit (just in case it's a water event). Manicure and pedicure games will also be available. Call Ann Speth, at 824-3099, if you plan to attend, or for more information.

GIRL SCOUT REGISTRATION THIS SATURDAY IN BETHEL

Girl Scout registration will be Saturday, Sept. 17, at the United Methodist Church, 60 Main Street, Bethel.

There is a great need for adults within the local troops. Any adult interested in helping local girls grow and learn is encouraged to register.

Andover couple has fond memories of semester spent teaching in China

"The people on Putuo Shan stared at us just the way we'd stare at two panda bears on the lawn of the Bethel Inn," said Ann Arbor, of Andover, describing a visit to an island off the Chinese mainland—one of the highlights of the semester she and her husband, John Rosenwald, spent teaching in China last fall.

In less adventurous years, Ann—a Mexico native—teaches junior high school English in Beloit, Wis., where John is an English professor at Beloit College. They currently summer in Andover, but hope within a couple of years to arrange their schedules so that they can spend much more of the year in Maine.

Before returning here, though, they plan to spend at least one more semester in China, a land whose people and culture they have come to love.

The opportunity to teach in China came about through an exchange program between Beloit College and Fudan University, in Shanghai—one of China's top schools.

John was invited to teach graduate courses for English majors, and soon after they arrived Ann was asked to teach undergraduate English.

While John's students were English specialists and virtually fluent in the language, Ann's students came from a variety of majors and many had been out of school for years.

"They were majoring in physics, chemistry, business or management," she said. "Many were older people who had been out of school since the Cultural Revolution, and they were invited to the university because they were now, for example, the head of a factory."

"They were thrilled to be back in school," she said. "Fudan University had been a dream they had nursed in the fields and factories."

A dream come true for the students, but nonetheless something less than dreamlike conditions for someone used to the physical comforts of the West.

Adequate heating was rare and privacy almost inconceivable.

John tried to clear up the situation by explaining that Ann was his second wife. This only made the situation worse.

"Shanghai is below the Yangtze River," John explained, "and by Chinese tradition there is no heat in public or private buildings below the Yangtze, despite the fact that from November to March the temperature often drops to 30 degrees."

The cold is intensified by the concrete floors in most buildings, John said. In his classrooms during the day the students would cluster wherever there was a patch of sun.

Hot water was available in public showers, Ann said, but because the rooms the students returned to were unheated, taking a shower and going home with wet hair often resulted in catching cold.

The rooms provided for John and Ann had the luxury of a combined heater/air conditioner, so when they could they offered their students the rare opportunity to take a hot shower and then dry off leisurely and comfortably in a warm room.

For the Chinese, privacy was virtually non-existent. The students slept eight to a room, and even senior faculty and university officials took crowded conditions for granted.

"It would be unheard of for the three of us to be alone here, having a private conversation in a room this large," John said, motioning around a small sitting room in their Andover farmhouse. "In fact, I've been told the Chinese have no word for privacy."

The lack of privacy in Shanghai made the brief vacation on the island of Putuo Shan all the sweeter. Just before they were to leave, their live-in tutor—who planned to accompany them—became ill; but rather than cancel the trip they set out on their own, trusting their own "baby Chinese" to see them through.

"We were able to find a room and food," John said, "but we certainly discovered the limits of our Chinese."

The islanders were friendly and, quite naturally, curious. The visiting couple did OK on basic questions, but when the conversation advanced they ran into trouble.

"They asked how old we were and we replied '44' and '33,'" John recalled. "That was fine, but then they asked if I had any children. I told them I had a daughter who was 21."

The islanders were aghast, asking Ann again and again how old she was. John, whose daughter is from an earlier marriage, tried to clear up the situation by explaining that Ann was his second wife.

This only made the situation worse. The word he chose to indicate "second" carried the meaning of "additional" rather than "subsequent," making their arrangement even more incomprehensible to the islanders, who were brought up in a strictly monogamous culture where divorce is rare.

Each time John and Ann went out to eat after that the islanders would gather around to stare. "The shopkeepers would all stop what they were doing and leave their shops to come watch us," John said. As the couple attempted to eat, the onlookers would repeat the same questions over and over, in the hope of understanding this scandalous Western liaison.

Eventually, a policeman who had learned some English by listening to the Voice of America was able to explain the situation to the other islanders.

"The scowls turned to smiles," John said. "The islanders were very relieved, but when we returned to the mainland and told the story to our tutor, she was terribly embarrassed that she hadn't taught us the right word."

The physical beauty of Putuo Shan, combined with the thrill and freedom of being on their own, made the island visit a highlight of their trip, but all such journeys must also have low points.

Although Shanghai lacks many amenities, it is still quite luxurious by Chinese standards. As one of China's key cities it benefits from government policies designed to speed its development and raise its standard of living.

A visit inland to Xian showed John and Ann a very different face of China.

Although it is the now world-famous city where hundreds of terracotta warriors were uncovered not long ago, Xian's 3 million residents have not benefited from China's development policies to the degree their more fortunate countrymen in key cities have.

"The desperation was clear," Ann said. "We saw beggars for the first time in China, and a person lying dead in the road."

At one point in their visit to Xian—and perhaps the nadir of their time in China—all vehicle and pedestrian traffic in the city suddenly stopped. They waited with everyone else, Ann recalls, until a convoy of military trucks came through, transporting bound prisoners.

"The trucks were entirely dark green," she said. "The only color was the red star on the side and the white leather straps on the guards' rifles."

But if China occasionally exposed them to scenes that were chilling to Westerners, the strongest images John and Ann took home with them were wonderfully positive impressions of the Chinese people.

"The people we met were extraordinarily bright and diverse," John said, "and interested in our culture."

Having come to love Chinese culture, he acknowledges ambivalence about the Westernization of which he and Ann are a part. "I'm afraid of what Westernization holds, especially for our students, for this intellectual, cultural elite."

"I'd prefer that they went ahead more slowly, but they'd think that is crazy. They've discovered that money is good, that freedom is good, and now it's full speed ahead."

IN SUZHOU, "THE VENICE OF CHINA," Ann Arbor and John Rosenwald are joined by their tutor, Hu Meng-jie, in one of the city's famous gardens.

NEWS FROM THE BETHEL AREA Health Center

The Bethel Area Health Center has received an award for health promotion and disease prevention excellence in the development and execution of their AIDS workshop for young adults in middle school and high school, announced Paul Bray, executive director of the center. This program was implemented by Muriel Whitney, RN-C who is the Director of Community Education for the Health Center.

The State Primary Care Association, the Maine Ambulatory Care Coalition, made the award to the health center. They said they were pleased to recognize such an outstanding, progressive program. Across the nation school administrators, teachers, parents and school board members are concerned about the necessity of teaching students about AIDS.

Greenwood City

By COLISTA MORGAN

A couple of nights this last week I awoke to the hammering of rain on the garage roof. The next morning the rain continued and the pond was leaden gray, streaked at times with waves of white.

Gulls are few here, winging along, dipping, slanting off on glides then beating back against the wind but one had made its way over the pond.

I saw two black ducks, flushed by something, wing their way down pond.

Many Goldfinches have been visiting my feeder for thistle seeds and during the rain didn't diminish. They looped along, beating out the rhythm of their scalloped flight. This vivacious little finch is one of the most interesting and conspicuous of the farm and field. Its flashing yellow, its undulating, bounding flight and its chirpy-like song have given it the name of W. H. Canary among the country people. These carefree Goldfinches wander happily about singing, wooing, mating, eating, until July or August without family worries. Goldfinches love companionship. They gather the year round in companies ranging from small groups, to large flocks. They are fond of many kinds of seeds.

On Sept. 1 it was beautiful. The pond was pleasant. The night's shadows still lingered beneath the trees, as I got up and peeked out. The sun had just peeked into the valley and the rays were beginning to dissolve the mist clinging to the pond.

Sometime later, as I walked down the driveway, the sound of bumblebees filled the air with their humming and buzz. How they do love the pink few-towered. This was their ceaseless industry, a frenzy of searching and gathering. An atmosphere of a beautiful day filled the valley. It was the forenoon and not yet time for lunch, so I entered a grove of trees, where I could watch the water. Drops of sunlight leaked through the foliage, brilliant sparkle to the leaves and grass.

Peace surrounded, a serenity pervaded the valley, the forest, the pond and me.

I thought, Why couldn't our whole planet be flooded with this? Why couldn't man construct his world to match this peace, about me? I wished that all the members of our nation could have shared with me this forenoon along the pond, seen the sunrise, observing the wild things, seeing the indescribable peacefulness of the natural world. Would they reconsider the direction in which they are going?

Crickets were now filling in earnest. These events did not consume my entire day.

THIS WEEK AT THE Moses Mason House

Anyone interested in attending the Maine Citizens for Historic Preservation Conference on Saturday, Oct. 1, should mail their registration by Sept. 26 to: Maine Citizens for Historic Preservation, P.O. Box 197, Bethel, Me. 04530. The conference will focus on "Mission and Maintenance: Preserving Maine's Religious Architecture." For further information, call Maine Citizens, at 753-3552. Copies of the program are available from the Bethel Historical Society office: 824-2908.

Society Curator of Collections Randall H. Bennett, author of "Oxford County, Maine: A Guide to its Historic Architecture," led an architectural tour, sponsored by Greater Portland Landmarks, of structures in Fryeburg, Lovell, Waterford and Bethel, last Saturday.

Recent contributors to the Bethel Historical Society's 1988 Endowment Campaign have brought the level so far this year to $4,220, from 188 donors. Among the most recent contributors are Walter and Phyllis Pales, Royal Oak, Me., in memory of Alice Kimball Fales; Richard and Jane Hosterman, West Bethel; Elizabeth S. Lord, Bethel; Richard and Carol Duplessis, Bethel; Donald and Edith Eddy, Bethel; in memory of Marjorie MacArthur Noll.

At sunset I became aware of cool air seeping into the valley and long shadows erased the sparkle of the sunlit water. It was again night in my valley.

Did you ever sit by the pond's edge eating your evening meal, while a very large dog and four ducks swam and ate together near to the shore? It was the scene last evening as I joined Milton and Eleanor Inman, John and Dot Betts and John's brother, Lee, at Camp Maplewood. Who would guess that the dog, Sandy, was a retriever, as he swam among the ducks. It was an amusing and beautiful sight. I enjoyed it all immensely.

Rena Curtis took me to Portland on Wednesday, where I had treatment on my eyes.

My visitors this week were Rena and Dot Curtis, Milton and Eleanor Inman, Leonas and Fay Holt, local, and Ernest Munif, of Bethel.

Marion Pulsifer had the Tuesday Club at her home this week. Our group was small: Fay Holt, Dot Betts, Zilpha DiArenzo, Colista Morgan and the hosts.

It seemed very natural to see the school buses going by again. Edith Lang, of West Paris, called on Fay Holt this week.

Richard and Marshall Baker, Belgrade, in memory of Larry and M. Wayne Patterson.

Also Lillian K. Bonhoff, Bangor, Pa., in memory of Lilla T. Morgan and Ethel Bisbee; Olive Head, West Bethel; Steve and Lynda Chandler, Bethel; Marian K. Rich, Bethel; Celia K. ## FRANKLIN GRANGE INSTALLS

Franklin Grange was installed Sept. 1 at West Paris in a triple installation with Rumford and the home Grange. Wayne Sherman, deputy, and staff conducted the ceremonies.

Sept. 5 Franklin Grange held ladies' night with Peggy Blake in charge of the officers and program. Officers were Myrtle Bisbee, deputy, Oxford Grange; D. Conno Tuttle, Mt. Sugarloaf; steward, Marion York, Waterford; lecturer, Peggy Blake; assistant steward, Priscilla Jasud, Rumford; L.A.S. Loretta Hall, Mystic Valley; treasurer, Lettie Brooks; secretary, Wilma Day, Franklin; chaplain, Marion Bennett, Paris; Ceres, Ruby Whitney, State member C.W.A. committee, Naples, Jean Griffin, Mt. Sugarloaf; Flora, Roberta Ramey; gatekeeper, Bertha Benoit, West Paris; C.W.A., Olive Howe, Florence Gustafson and Mary Billings; executive committee, Joyce Hoyt, Franklin; Althea Tucker and Marion Easter, Rumford.

The Grange program opened by all singing "I Want a Girl" with Althea Fish at the piano. She was from Duxfield. The mystery march was held while the program cast were dressing back of the stage. The curtain rolled open and the ladies all dressed in gay clothes entered the stage to their chairs and they carried out a variety of numbers and conversed with each other. There were music and numbers, jokes, etc., between the club members all the evening.

While they were redressing to join us again the count of Granges was taken.

Their aunt, Bella Arsenault, and son Joseph, were visiting from Summerside, Prince Edward Island, Canada. A big reunion took place. Those attending were Mrs. Arsenault's brother, Joseph Gallant, of Ledgeview Memorial Home, West Paris, and the following: Mr. and Mrs. Michael Discko, Stratford, Conn.; Mr. and Mrs. Paul Sherman, Stratford; Marie Martone, Stratford; Mr. and Mrs. Edward Vigue, Gorham, N.H.; Mrs. Flora Landry, Rumford; Mrs. Pam Heath and son Jessie, Rumford; Mr. and Mrs. James Babineau, Frye; Mr. and Mrs. Norbert Gallant, Mexico; Mr. and Mrs. Frank Swan, Turner; Danny, Louella, Mark Kelly and Sadie Cole, Gilead; Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Gallant, Bethel.

25 DIE ON ROADS IN AUGUST
The state Bureau of Safety reports that highway crashes claimed 24 lives during August.
Of the 17 people who died in passenger vehicle crashes, none were reported to have been wearing safety belts and three were ejected from the vehicles. "You are 25 times more likely to die in a crash if you are thrown out of your automobile," said Albert Godfrey, Sr., of the Maine Highway Safety Commission. "By holding you in your seat, safety belts prevent you from being thrown about the passenger compartment or out of the vehicle."
The monthly highway fatality report went on to point out that 10 of the deaths involved alcohol, six of the victims were pedestrians and one was a motorcyclist without a helmet.
The death toll through August stands at 164, 21 over the five-year average. In 1987 there were 153 through the same period.

Locke Mills

By LORRAINE MILLS

My apologies, again, for not getting any news in last week. Even I could not believe the week I had. I was in Mexico twice on Sunday, in Rumford on Monday, in Norway on Tuesday, Dixfield on Wednesday and Thursday and Norway again on Friday, and as I sat down on Saturday to write the news it belatedly dawned on me that Monday was a holiday and we had to get the news in a day earlier. I threw up my hands mumbled, "It figures." After the week I'd had it was inevitable that something else would go wrong. This week I'm leaving tomorrow (Friday) morning, if all goes well, for the Northern New England Women's Retreat of the Assemblies of God in Nashua, N.H. for a couple of days. There are three of us going from our church: Marilyn Van Horn, Dot Chapping and I. Linda Hughes planned to go but two years old Rusty, whom I took care of a while back while James was in the hospital, is in the hospital himself with salmonella. Poor little guy, has been very sick for over a week and in the hospital five days at this writing and will be there at least two to three more days. I went to see him and his mother at the Rumford Community Hospital last night and it is so hard to see such an active, happy boy just lying there with tubes in his arms, hardly moving. I was pleasantly surprised to see how much the hospital had improved its pediatric ward since my boy was there. Has it been—yes it has—30 years ago. At that time he was put in a crib and I was told to go home and not to come back until they called me. Now they even have beds for the mothers; a much better system.

The Greenwood Fire Department held its monthly meeting Tuesday evening at the Fire Station. They plan to clean chimneys the weekend of Sept. 24-25, weather permitting. If you want your chimney cleaned this year please get in touch with members of the fire department even if you have had it done every year in the past.

Every two weeks the pulp search committee of the Locke Mills Union Church has been meeting with the committee from the Rumford Point Church and with interim pastor, Rev. Nash Garabedian Jr. to go over interviews and profiles. Hopefully this intensified search will result in finding a pastor soon.

Harry Swan Jr. was on vacation from Aug. 28-Sept. 5 but they were unable to go camping due to school starting in the middle.

I was interested in the comments about the planes. As I've said before, I love planes. I especially like them low and slow so I can get a good look at them but they all give me a sense of pride in our

Tri-Town Rescue

Tri-Town Rescue had a successful calendar sale, with over 400 calendars ordered and 48 advertisers supporting the service. Thank you to everyone who helped with the sale.

Search and Rescue will meet 7 p.m. Thursday, Sept. 15, to practice a grid search. The team was called to assist in a search in northern Maine over the weekend, but the woman was found before the team needed to leave. It was with relief that they heard the news, as the woman was lost near a lake 60 miles north of Lincoln.

For anyone interested in training to join the ambulance service, both Bethel Rescue and Oxford Hills Adult Education are offering an Advanced First Aid course on Monday nights, starting Sept. 15. The Oxford Hills course will be Monday and Thursday nights. The Bethel course will be Monday nights, with a few Thursdays thrown in to meet the required hours and complete the course by the end of December.

The in-service dispatchers are meeting at the barn Monday, Sept. 19, at 7 p.m. to go over standard procedures. Anyone who is interested in answering the phone and coordinating first responders for the service may call Michelle Blake (674-2091) or attend the meeting.

The registration forms are available for anyone interested in the state EMS conference at Sugarloaf the weekends of Sept. 19 and Oct. 1. For more details, contact Jane Chandler (674-2963).

great country and in the boys who serve it. If I'm out in the fields I still wave just as I used to during the war and sometimes they dip the wings in return. I'd miss them if they did not go over, and I'd sure like to have been a mouse in the wall of the helicopter when those boys got a glimpse of what was in their lights. As it was I got a chuckle but I'll bet their comments were precious.

Crescent Park weekly

By ALEX GILLIES

As we arrived on Tuesday we were ready for a great week. Our teachers greeted us at the doorway of our classroom. We switched classes for the first real time so far. The other teachers told us about that subject and then we started working.

The Kindergarten started on Tuesday and the 5th Grade was happy to have them there. We helped them out and made sure they had fun. Mrs. Cohen and Mrs. Salaway were very busy helping them out. Later on in the year we and the Kindergarten will be writing stories together.

Some 5th Graders get to help in the office when Mrs. Morgan takes a lunch break. Some of these kids are: Jessica Coolidge, Jared S. Crockett, Leah Bonema, Anneliese Bass and Gabriel Perkins. They spend their lunch and recess once a week, for a quarter, in the office.

PUTNAM ATTENDS ROTC CAMP
Cadet Sarah Putnam, daughter of Joan Putnam, of Bethel, recently attended Army ROTC advanced camp at Fort Lewis, Wash.

The six-week camp, normally attended by cadets between their third and fourth years of college, included instruction in communications, management and survival training.

Successful completion of the advanced camp and graduation from college results in a commission as a second lieutenant in either the U.S. Army, Army Reserve or National Guard.

Cadet Putnam is a student at the University of Colorado, at Boulder.

Notes from the Woodstock Historical Society

Following is a comment on the performance of Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis when she was first lady: "A youthful First Lady, Mrs. Kennedy was especially interested in restoring and preserving the character of the public rooms of the White House. She was responsible for redecorating rooms and bringing in furniture and paintings to enhance the historic atmosphere of the Executive Mansion. Mrs. Kennedy accompanied her husband on several important trips to foreign countries, meeting and charming heads of state. Her ability to speak to the peoples of foreign countries in their native tongues won their affection." Richard Coffman.

Helen Remsen has given some items to the museum.

NEWS FROM THE Windy Valleys Snowmobile Club

Harvest time is here and, for many, another enjoyable winter of snowmobiling is just around the corner. With it comes our monthly potluck suppers and business meetings.

The first meeting of our season is this Thursday, Sept. 15, at the clubhouse in Newry. Bring a pot of goodies and join us for supper, starting at 6:30 p.m.

The meeting will begin at 7:30 p.m. This first meeting will include election of officers and setting up our 1989 calendar of events. Present members are reminded that dues need to be paid so your insurance will not lapse at the end of the month.

State troopers getting faster-firing handguns

Maine's largest police department began the process this month of converting to a new weapon to be used by its sworn officers. Maine State Police Chief Col. Andrew E. Demers said his officers will be issued Beretta 9mm semi-automatic pistols, replacing the six-shot revolver that Maine troopers have used since their department was organized in 1925.

Each officer will undergo three days of classroom and firing range instruction before being issued the weapon, which will replace the Smith & Wesson .357 magnum revolver that state troopers have used for the past several years.

Col. Demers said, "I'm confident the new weapon will provide troopers with a greater ability to defend themselves and the public against any adversary. Maine troopers increasingly confront a criminal element which is armed with sophisticated weaponry, including semi-automatic pistols."

The new sidearm has more than double the firepower of the older weapon. Col. Demers said the main advantage of the new gun is that it holds 14 rounds compared to the six rounds of the Smith & Wesson. In addition, each officer will have 26 additional bullets on their holsters, compared to the present 12.

The State Police tactical teams, which specialize in hostage-type situations, were issued the Beretta earlier this year as were the 24 troopers who graduated in August from the State Police Training Academy.

Commissioned officers were the first to undergo the firearms training this month; they will be followed by sergeants and troopers. The training will take place at various sites around Maine. In addition to state troopers, members of the Intergovernmental Drug Enforcement Bureau and Maine Liquor Enforcement Officers will also be issued the new gun.

NOTES FROM Telstar Guidance

The Guidance Department will hold its annual series of Parent Nights for parents of students in Grades 9-12.

For the convenience of parents, Guidance Counselor Daniel Hart will host the orientation sessions in three of the district's towns. He looks forward to seeing parents at any one of the following sessions: Sept. 21, 7 p.m., Woodstock School multi-purpose room; Sept. 29, 7 p.m., Andover Elementary School grade 5 classroom; Oct. 5, 7 p.m., Telstar Regional High School library.

These informational meetings are designed to help parents learn more about what guidance services will be available to students this year. The programs will also feature Louise Chapman, who will explain the state-mandated health curriculum being taught to freshmen students this year.

The 1½-hour programs will consist of an overview of guidance services; issues for students and parents, career choices, testing, study habits and more. Telstar faculty will also be on hand to answer questions and take part in group discussions. All parents are urged to attend one of the sessions.

Just a short walk down Mill Hill from the Bethel Common, right onto a well-marked driveway, brings you to the extensive grounds of L'Auberge Country Inn.

According to Susan and David Burnham, who presently manage operations, the facility was originally a barn built by Guy Thurston in 1833 to stable horses used in his logging activities. During the period 1940-56 the property was purchased and gradually converted into a private residence. However, as tourist interest in the Bethel area increased, the owners in 1976 undertook a series of renovations leading to the establishment of the business in its present form.

Today, L'Auberge Country Inn can accommodate up to 16 persons in seven tastefully decorated rooms, supplemented by a spacious loft.

Susan and David indicate that guests often return to the Inn for additional stays because of the excellent cuisine, the comfortable interior appointments, and the colorful, well-manicured flower gardens.

Good fishing in future

Maine's lakes, rivers and streams received nearly one million trout and salmon during the annual spring fish stocking season.

According to David Locke, superintendent of hatcheries for the Department of Inland Fisheries and Wildlife, a total of 948,529 fish were stocked into 392 waters throughout the state. The fish were produced at the seven fish hatcheries and two rearing stations operated by the department.

The breakdown of fish stocked, by species: landlocked salmon—198,874 in 118 waters; lake trout—57,289 in 28 waters; brown trout—390,88 in 57 waters; brook trout—296,450 in 180 waters; splake—7,028 in nine waters.

The fish will be stocked during the fall stocking season.

LANDSCAPING WITH FLOWERS

Landscaping with Perennials is the subject of a new course this fall, offered by SAD #44 Adult and Community Education. The course will be taught by Joy Yarnell and will meet at her home, in Upton.

The course is designed for the beginner who is interested in establishing a garden emphasizing perennials and native plants. The scheduling of the class is unique in adult education, with sessions planned in the fall and again in the spring to allow participants to actually undertake their own projects.

The introductory meeting of the Landscaping with Perennials class will be Saturday, Sept. 17, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., in Upton.

Mrs. Yarnell has an exceptional garden and is eager to guide others in their gardening endeavors. To enroll call the SAD #44 Adult and Community Education office, 824-2780.

Two local students get aggie scholarships

Bobbi Jo Manan, of Bryant Pond, and Alan D. Verrill, of West Paris, were among 48 young men and women from Maine families with farm or forestry backgrounds to receive special educational scholarships from the Maine Department of Agriculture. A total of $24,000 was distributed to recipients by the Department's Scholarship Fund Committee for the 1988-89 school year. Most of the students received a $500 scholarship, which can be used to pay for any type of post-secondary educational studies.

The source of the scholarships is the "Maine Rehabilitation Fund." That fund originated with a federal grant designed to provide loans to low income rural families during the Great Depression. In recent years, a revolving loan fund set up by the Farmers Home Administration replaced the original program and the Department has used the fund to provide annual scholarships earmarked specifically for the children of families involved in farming or forestry.

THOUGHTS FROM THE Pastor's Study

The Bethel Area Clergy Association, with the help of pastors of surrounding churches, brings you these meditations. Not based on any set theme, they will be individual for each pastor. It is hoped you will find in these words, comfort and help for your daily life.

A European woman who had settled in Africa once hired a household servant, whom she trained for three months. After that period, just as he had become accustomed to the routines of the house, he asked to be released, in order that he might work for her neighbor. The woman was distressed and urged the servant to stay with her. But he was determined to leave. "You see," he explained, "before I came here I decided to become either a Christian or a follower of Mohammed. I have lived in your home for three months and have seen how a Christian lives. Now I will live in your neighbor's home and experience the life of a Mohammedan. Then I will decide." Her reaction? "You might have told me that when you came!"

Think back on what the last three months have been like in your household. Would a stranger, foreign to the ways of faith, be moved to assume your belief after living with you for a time? Many of us would be dismayed to think that we were being observed so clearly or that someone might be judging our convictions by our daily behavior. And yet our faith is always shown far more clearly by our attitudes and deeds. We are witnesses, knowingly or unknowingly. "I will show you my faith by what I do," said James. So do we show forth our faith, not only by our words and our church attendance, but by our daily behavior on the street, at work and in our homes.

What would a visitor to your home conclude if asked what it is you believe most deeply? It's worth considering.

Lakes Association meets

Approximately 50 residents from the 14 ponds and lakes in the area met at the Woodstock School, Bryant Pond, Sept. 3, at 10 a.m. for the second annual meeting of the Community Lakes Association of Woodstock/Greenwood.

The association's goal is to promote the general well-being of interested citizens, preserve and protect ponds, be aware of water quality and set safety standards.

In carrying out this goal, Jim Chandler, education coordinator of the Oxford County Soil and Water Conservation District, reported that most of the ponds in the area are now being monitored by volunteers. On Aug. 6 a lake monitoring workshop was conducted by Mr. Chandler at the Maine Conservation School at Lake Christopher in Bryant Pond. From this experience more volunteers came forth to carry out this very necessary measurement of water quality. Mr. Chandler also reported on a statewide meeting of lakes associations that he and some members of the Community Lakes Association of Woodstock/Greenwood attended. From this gathering of concerned conservationists there emerged countless initiatives that must be addressed.

Many of the same petitions came from the floor of the Community Lakes Association meeting, such as boat regulations, curbing or neutralizing the sources of acid rain, acquisition of lake frontage for public access and protection of natural areas, distribution of copies of lake regulations, wildlife education, jet-ski regulations and broadening the wardens service.

There is a great need to encourage the Legislature in the State of Maine to begin to address many growing problems associated with lake safety and water quality, an association spokesman said. The Community Lakes Association strongly urges all interested persons to get in touch with any of the officers of the organization and offer to work with committees that have been formed to bring about solutions to these ongoing environmental problems.

The following officers were elected to serve this year: president, Eleanor Wilson; vice-president, Nancy Willard; treasurer, Merle Ring. The Association will meet again on Sept. 27 at 7 p.m. at the Woodstock School, Bryant Pond.

JACKSON-SILVER SUPPER
SEPT. 15; PROGRAM FOLLOWS

Jackson-Silver American Legion Post #68 and the Auxiliary will hold its annual picnic supper at the Post home Sept. 15, at 6 p.m. The families of all Legion members are invited. Hot dogs, chips and beverages will be served. Those attending should bring a salad, a hot dish or a dessert.

Following the picnic, Mrs. Lyon will present her annual music program. This year the theme is "Patriotism through Music" and will include stories and music which have helped inspire love of country at different times in our history. Members of three different groups will help with this presentation: Jane Chandler's Girl Scout Troop from Bryant Pond, Junior members of the Auxiliary and SAL (Sons of the Legion). The public is invited to this program, which will start at 7 p.m.

Gould Academy students started classes this week

Following overnight orientation trips for 83 new students on the lakes and mountains of western Maine, and course registration Saturday for all 200 students, Gould Academy began its 152nd year of classes Monday, Sept. 12.

A week prior to the formal opening of school, a combined group of Telstar High School and Gould student leaders kicked off the start of the school year with a four-day workshop on student leadership, led by National Training Laboratories staffers.

Bethel students this year include: sophomore Jennifer Brown, junior Monika Burk, freshman Susan Crandall, junior Kevin Davis, senior Amy Ford, freshman Bryce Gasser, sophomore Sara Kailey, sophomore Gregory Kaufman, senior Megan McGuire, freshman Jessica Mercier, senior Benjamin Michaud, sophomore Martha Newell, junior Maria Owinga, junior Rob Todd, freshman Jason Walega and freshman Amanda Wight. In addition to the nearly 80 students from Maine, over 100 students will be attending Gould from out of state, including foreign students from France, Sweden, Germany and Bermuda. Joining them will be new faculty members Ted Lawrence, chemistry, from Warrensburg, N.Y., and Bonnell Gardner and his wife, Jean, long-time teachers at the Hill School in Pennsylvania as well as the Gould Academy Summer School.

The most visible change at the Academy is the long-awaited opening of a new athletic field and the seeding of a second new one as well, both of which will be dedicated on Alumni Weekend, Oct. 1. Adjacent to the fields are several kilometers of new trails for cross-country skiing and running. On campus students will also find most of the school's computer equipment upgraded with IBM personal computers and a host of new software programs.

The first sports event of the fall season will be on Saturday, Sept. 17, as Caitlin joins a brother, Benjamin, age three.

Michael and Cheryl Ramsay, of Norway, are pleased to announce the arrival of a baby boy, Daniel Richard Ramsay, born Aug. 30 at 6:20 p.m. at Stephens Memorial Hospital, Norway, weighing 6 lbs., 10 oz. Maternal grandparents are Randall and Elizabeth Gilbert, of Bethel. Paternal grandparents are Richard and Marilyn Ramsay, of South Paris. Daniel joins a brother, Ryan, age eight.

Brian and Christine (Mills) Blake, of Bethel, are pleased to announce the birth of their second daughter, Mallory Jean, Sept. 8, at Stephens Memorial Hospital. She weighed 7 lbs. 12 oz. She joins a four-year-old sister, Courtney. Paternal grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Charles Blake, of Bethel. Maternal grandmother is Mrs. Doris Mills, also of Bethel.

Boaters to fete beauty of river in foliage flotilla Saturday, Oct. 1st

The Second Annual Foliage Flotilla on the Androscoggin River will be held on Saturday, Oct. 1, with a rain date of Oct. 2.

Steve Keane, chairman of the event, said put-in will be at the junction of Route 2 and the Pleasant River just above West Bethel at 1 p.m. After a journey of about two hours, the take-out will be at the Route 2 rest area by the Sunday River Road turn.

Refreshments will be sold at the take-out by the Junior Class at Telstar Regional High School. Commemorative T-shirts will be sold by the Friends of the Androscoggin, sponsors of the flotilla. Chairman Keane said that parking is very limited at the put-in and that those participating should expect to park a short distance from the river or create informal shuttle services.

In the first flotilla held in 1987, participating watercraft included canoes, a rowboat, kayaks and a sailboat, canoes being the most numerous. The Friends of the Androscoggin have designed the day to be a fun, family outing to celebrate the foliage season and the beauty of the Androscoggin River.

Selectmen hold special meeting to clear agenda

At a specially called meeting Monday night, the Bethel Board of Selectmen took up some matters that were shelved for lack of time in previous weeks.

Among these were appointments to the Planning Board and Conservation Commission. Dennis Doyon and Bill Pooley were named alternates on the Planning Board, while Bonnie Pooley, Tom Wheeler, Walter Hatch, Jon Goldberg and Debbie Michaud were named to the newly created Conservation Commission.

Another holdover matter concerned junkyard and auto graveyard permits. The selectmen voted, 5-0, to approve an men's varsity soccer, women's varsity field hockey and women's varsity JV soccer play their first games.

auto graveyard permit (with conditions) for Joe Bailey, on Vernon Street; they approved a junkyard permit for Clayton Sweat, on Rte. 2, near the overpass.

In new business, the board approved the expenditure of $2,850 from the Airport Reserve Account for road paving at the airport industrial park. The work will be done by Pike Industries, which is already at the airport paving the new runway.

The selectmen discussed the possibility of having curb-side pick-up of household trash throughout town as an alternative to landfilling of trash. The landfill is almost filled up and the town must find an alternative method of disposing of its solid waste in the next two or three years.

The assessors announced that they would be meeting Thursday and Friday with property owners who had questions about their new assessments.
